These deeds conveyed the coal underlying 6,250 acres of land on the river front in Richland district, above the city, to W. M. Dunlap, and the total consideration is $181,958 76. In turn, Mr. Dunian conveys the properties to a symplicate of Pennsylvania men, headed by J. V. Thompson, of Uniontown, cap-italist and banker, and the consideration in this end of the deal is not made pub-

mi and lands outend from a not	nt on

These lands extend from a point on the river front immediately above the Richland coal works of John P. Gilchrist, to Short creek, a distance of six or seven miles, and it is stated positive ly by the interested parties that this coal is the most valuable in this neighborhood, being easy of access for shipment by both water and rail and with the best bituminous coal market in the world surrounding it within short dis-

The properties, it is said, will not likely be developed by the Thompson syndicate at once, but in the event that the Wheeling board of trade's campaign for the "Greater Wheeling" re-sults in the establishment of great industries on the sites above the city, openings will be made, of course, and coal supplied to all such industries.

Mr. Dunlap Talks.

These options have been carried by Mr. Dunlap, who is a well known citlzen of Washington county, Pa., residing at West Alexander, for eight years, and were included in the Wheeling Consolidated Coal Company deal that went by the board some time ago. They have been carried by Mr. Dunlar at considerable personal sacrifice, and his trials were increased by the avidity of some of the farmers from whom he had optioned coal.

"Don't say anything to me about the invariable simplicity and honesty of the farmer," said Mr. Dunlap to an Intelliman yesterday afternoon There are just as big rascals in the agricultural class as there are elsewhere, and I have encountered them in my deals for coal lands in this county. There is one instance that I recall when the sharp practice of a farmer compelled me to pay out $5,000 more than had been agreed upon between us. Everywhere I found a disposition to extert the very last cent possible."

These lands are underlaid with the Pittsburgh veals of coal, known as one of the best steam coals in the country. The thickness of the vein varies from four feet two inches to over nine feet. Mr. Dunlap had thirty openings made, twenty-three of which showed a thickness of five feet ten inches. There is not another block of coul in the tristate country so advantageously situaend of the holdings, would be sufficient to drain the entire block, if it should be found desirable to work the coal in that Without & Rival.

"Whatet in not phother place in the Ohioppalito, so advantageously situated for insustrial enterprises as the lands on the river front, above Wheeling," and Mrs. Dunlap enthusiastically," and Isam not surprised to hear that your board of trade is expecting to locate new plants on the land whose coal rights I acquired. That reminds me of something that has never been made public. In the winter of 1898, while in New York on a business trip, I learned from representatives of the Mannesmanns, the great German tube and steel makers, that they had their eye on a site just above Wheeling. The negotiations had extended to a point where the deal was about to be put through, when the Maine was blown up in Havana harbor, and was followed shortly afterward by the unpleasant relations with the German government. This state of affairs caused the Mannesmanns to give up their project, and later they located in Chicago instead of near Wheeling. Their plans were to erect a $3,000,000 plant above the city for the manufacture of projectiles for the American and other governments." So the blowing up of the Maine was an unfortunate occurrence for Wheel-

Good Prices

The price paid for these lands by Mr. Dunlap is from $20 to $50 an acre, which shows their out of the ordinary value.

Lands in Marshall county were recent-ly optioned for as low as $10 an acre and in other counties at prices lower than $10. The extraordinary advan-tages of this block of coal leases in the matter of transportation facili-ties add to their value in the market enormously,

Mr. Dunlap said he had another deal on for 3,000 acres of coal lands in Liberty district, lying north of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, which he expects to close this week. He did not say to whom these lands would be sold. He intimated that the purchasers would work their holdings.
